South African Native National Congress.

The fourth Annual Meeting of the South African Native National Congress was this year held at Kroonstad, Orange Free State from 30th ultimo to 3rd. instant and was a attended by various Chiefs, Headmen and leading Native representatives from the four Provinces which comprise the Union. Revd. John L. Dube of Ohlange Phœnix, Natal, who is the President of this Native National Congress, presided. There were over one hundred representatives some of whom came from the extreme corners of the Union, such as Bechuanaland, Northern Transvaal, Transkei and Zululand. What was noticeable in this gathering was the fact that all the Bantu races of the Union were represented. And this was due to the fact that the Native Deputation from England was expected to give its report in connection with the Natives land Act 1913 which had been passed by the Union Parliament.

Dr. Rubusana of East London, after giving the financial report, gave a brief but exhaustive summary of what the Deputation did in England, inter-alia stated that they had exhausted all constitutional means, in this country, for redress of their grievances which were the results of the operation of the Act, the Natives—through their Congress—decided to send a deputation to England to lay their cause before the Imperial Government and the people of Great Britain. What was uppermost in the collective mind of their Congress in coming to this decision was to avert the danger of the Natives being forced to commit acts of violence. They also did that to save the Union from the disintegration which, they believed, would inevitably follow the enforcement of the Act.

The Doctor then dealt with the different sections of the Act which operated unjustly against the Natives, and showed that the operation of the Act had produced six classes of sufferers viz: (a) persons under notice to quit (the farms): (b) persons actually evicted from farms: (c) Migrants to territories outside the Union: (d) Homeless wanderers with families and stock in search of new homes: (e) Persons who had to leave their crops unreaped, or who had not ploughed last season: and (f) Persons who yield unrequired labour. These cases, the speaker, said, are the results of Parliament legislating Natives off the farms without making provision for their settlement elsewhere, and declared that the avowed object of this law was to force the Natives to labour by making it the only condition of their living on a white man's farm, and this was slavery pure and simple.

After the deputation had interviewed the Rt. Hon. Lewis Harcourt, Colonial Secretary in England who stated that he had the assurence of General Botha the Prime Minister of the Union, that this Act was of a temporary nature, the deputation proceeded to address some of the members of the Houses of Commons and Lords and the British public. All classes and shades of opinion in England deprecated the passing of this measure by the Union Parliament and expressed the hope that it might be rescinded soon. When war broke out in Europe, the deputation decided to suspend all operations in order not to embarrass the Government as they deemed that their duty, as British subjects, was to present a united front to the enemies of their King-Emperor.

After discussing the report a resolution was passed thanking the deputation for their services, and the European friends in Great Britain and this country who had rendered them assistance. The English Press of various political opinion was also thanked most sincerely for its whole-hearted support of the deputation.

The Congress then dealt with the financial report of which the initial expenses aroused a storm of protest from some of the members who thought that too much money had been spent in this country prior to the departure of the deputation. After an explanation had been given by the Treasurer of the fund that the expenditure was caused by the collectors' having to cover a wide area in collecting same, the matter, however, was allowed to pass and the Financial statement adopted.

The Congress then dealt with the amendment of the Constitution and a Select Committee was appointed to draft a new Constitution. After this a resolution was passed congratulating General Botha on his splendid victory in German South-West as well as in quelling the rebellion within the Union.

The election of Officers was then proceeded with. This resulted in the election of the following members, Rev. John L. Dube (President), Dr. W. B. Rubusana, Chief S. Mini, P. ka Isaac Seme Esq., Messrs. S. M. Makhatho, T. M. Mapikela; D. S. Letanka and L. T. Mvabaza (Vice Presidents), Mr. J. B. Twayi (Treasurer), Mr. R. V. Selope Thema (General Secretary), and Mr. H. Selby Msimang (Corresponding Secretary). The Rev. E. J. Mqoboli D. D. and the Rev. H. R. Ngcayiya were unanimously appointed chaplains of the National Congress while Mr. P. Pahlane of Bloemfontein was appointed Sergeant-at-arms. Finally the Congress dealt with grievances with the result that a deputation was appointed to interview the Minister for Native Affairs with regards thereto.

National Spirit.

One of the outcomes of the terrible war is the waking up of the idea of National unity, a cognition of the need of united action as the only possible way to secure that independence and fairplay that is so precious to any fellow worthy of the name of man. And this awakening is going to revolutionize things generally in Britain and elsewhere; for it is impossible for the Mother country to vastly improve her outlook without her oversea Dominions being affected thereby. We find now that what was looked upon as the moral and valid a year or two ago is now held to be highly immoral and intolerable. The national thought has changed, and that means that other things will have to be changed that they may be kept in line with the new national thought. Anything that is found to be acting contrary to the new faith will be held to be at emnity with the welbeing of the nation. This of course is a logical way of treating the matter, but it will no doubt be hard upon those who prey upon national wealth and ignore national health. It will be found that there can be no room for a select privileged few who imagine themselves to be vastly superior to the average man, and who hold that they have a right to exploit and enslave him. The strong tendency to prey upon poverty and defencelessness shows the low culture of the civilization that is so often boasted of, and it is therefore well that a reaction is setting in, or there is no saying how far down the anti-religious mania would have gone. The many ill-natured remarks that have been made in this country against the neighbour simply because those neighbours were not of the same complexion as the ill-natured ones; proves how little hold religion had of them, yet the depraved could not see the futility of kicking against the pricks, an admonition that all persons more or less ignore who act against national unity. They suppose that only their own variety can form a nation, they should remember, however that modern nations are political nations, not only by blood or kin—and the political nations are more positvely collections of various peoples who combine for general benefit. In this sense there must be a clearer vision of the economic parts, and a resolve for even-handed justice for all persons. It is the thievish injustice that has led the awakening in Britain. The man who cannot understand the sign of the time will suffer for his folly, for the inevitable progress of humanity will not tolerate the skulker, even though he skulks for his own ends.

As a Member of the Durban Town Council, Mr. C. S. Jameson said "No reliance could be placed upon the Native press." Now as "the Native press" means "Ilanga lase Natal," we have a right to take exception to Mr. Jameson's opinion, and we therefore ask him kindly to specify any statement of ours that not agree with common sense. On the subject of which he was speak in, viz. For Mr. Donovan to have control of Native Barracks, we do not agree with Mr. Jameson, as it would likely produce entanglement between Departments. Our idea is that each Department should do its own work; for as soon as simplicity is departed from, complication ensues. The dividing up of the Native Administration will be bad for Durban as it affects so much as Durban's economic affairs.

Mr. C. S. Jameson's Idea

The Senior Attendant at Matyeni has been transferred to Market Master of the Indian Market Durban, thus the dealers and customers at Matyeni have a controller of great experience and kindly disposition. The Bantu frequenting Matyeni are conscious of having the good services of a very able and deligent Officer who has greatly helped to keep the Corporation and the Native people in peaceful touch with each other; this the Municipality should be aware of and we venture to point it out, although Councillor C. S. Jameson believes that what the Native Press does not count for much. The Natives look upon Mr. Donnelly as an upright and conscientious man, example to his fellow officers. Native people in saying adieu to him protem. hope that he will have health and prosperity; and the people of the Indian Market will be conscious of having a good man among them.

Mr. Donnelly.

Forecasting in a sermon in Temple Church (London) Dean Ecclesiastical. Christianity. said points to the future of the Europe that will emerge from the great war. He said "that the final issue of this immense conflict will not be favorable to ecclesiastical Christianity as we have known it hitherto. Our Dean's belief is that ecclesiastical Christianity is coming out so badly in the European crisis is that because the highest interests of mankind are well be challenged." A second reason is that religion has been proved by the test of war to be in bondage to denominational limits. "It is," he instanced the failure of the Church to rise to the height of the opportunity which it claims to possess." The Church has fallen conspicuously behind the rest of the civilized world in not condemning and repudiating the moral teaching of German diplomacy and the horrors of German warfare." Rather strong words of Dean Hendson, but who will prove him to be mistaken?

Ecclesiastical. Christianity.

Work for Rent is a recognised condition under the Land Act, but although the value of the work is assumed to be of somewhat uniform value, there is yet a greater assumption, and with less grounds to support it, viz. that the value of what is rented is also of a comperative near value. Now in fact cases the alleged accepable value is such that no respectable commercial firm would do business on such lines. And yet the Parliamentary element did not see it, or the Minister thought anything was good enough for the mass of unskilled workers to sustain the Labora less of the country. It is about as unwise as some farmers milk cows upon which your family are depending. Is it not possible to cast a proper reflection on the measure? Does the Act reflect credit upon its framers and supporters of it? That question analytical future will testify, probably to the dismay of those infatuated with it.

Work for Rent.

It is half feared that Native Colonials Government are of the opinion that the gambling tendency is extensive among a large portion of the native people, and it will prove to much trouble, for we know of no greater incentive to dishonesty than the love of gambling. The Government should not only forbid the Natives and all coloured persons the privilege of such custom, but should make it penal for anyone to abet or aid in such transactions. The position of the great bulk of these people is that of employees, and the labour of the State, for that reason suppression of anything that will injure the fidelity and dependability of the labourer is warrantable. The matter is very serious and therefore should be treated seriously.

Natives Gambling.
